Trail Guide

Day hiking in Grand Canyon is one way to experience some of the canyon's rich natural beauty and immense size. No permits or fees are required for day hikes. When hiking into the canyon, plan 1/3 of your time to walk down and 2/3 to trudge back. Assuming that you are physically fit and have adequate food and water (at least 3 quarts / liters per person), the following day hikes are considered reasonable for most people during the summer months. The numbers following correlate with the maps above.

Always check the status of trails before traveling to the trailhead.

1. Bright Angel Point Trail
0.5 mi./0.8 km round-trip; 30 minutes approximate round-trip hiking time. A short walk on a paved trail leads to a spectacular view of the canyon. The trail begins at the log shelter in the parking area by the visitor center or at the corner of the back porch behind the lodge. Obtain self-guiding nature trail pamphlets from a box along the trail.

2. Transept Trail
3.0 mi./4.8 km round-trip; 1.5 hours approximate round-trip hiking time. Trail follows the canyon rim from Grand Canyon Lodge to the North Rim Campground.

3. Bridle Trail

4. North Kaibab Trail
Distance and hiking times vary. This is the only maintained trail into the canyon from the North Rim. Even a short hike to Coconino Overlook (1.5 miles / 2.4 km round-trip) or Supai Tunnel (4 miles / 6.5 km round-trip) can give you an appreciation for the canyon's rich natural beauty and immense size. A hike to Roaring Springs and back is extremely strenuous and takes a full day (7-8 hours)—begin your hike before 7:00 a.m. Roaring Springs lies 3,050 feet / 930 m below the canyon rim and is 9.4 miles / 15 km round-trip. A day hike beyond Roaring Springs is not recommended. Many years of experience have shown that hikers who proceed beyond Roaring Springs during the hottest parts of the day have a much greater probability of suffering from heat-related illness, injury, or death. Under no circumstances should you attempt to hike from the rim to the river and back in one day! Round trip to the Colorado River is 28 miles / 45 km and the trail descends almost 6,000 ft. / 1,800 m.

The opening of the North Kaibab Trail may be delayed due to severe winter damage. More information on the North Kaibab Trail is displayed on page 11. This trail is also used by mules.
